Our mission is to empower businesses, big or small, with the tools and insights they need to connect with their target audience and achieve sustainable growth.

Project Overview:

Hey, I've got a new project for you. We're working with a small retail vendor who specializes in food and beverage products. They're still getting a feel for their market and figuring out their customer base, so they really need our help with insights.

I've handed you a sample of their marketing data. What I need you to do is build a BI tool that can provide answers to a few key questions they have:

1. How are their recent marketing campaigns performing? They've run 6 campaigns, and they want to know how well each one is doing. Look at metrics like impressions, click-through rates, conversions, and any other relevant data that can tell us which campaigns are successful.
2. How are their products performing? We need to dive into product sales and understand which ones are performing well and which aren't. This will give them a clear view of their product lineup's performance in the market.
3. Who are their customers? We need to segment their customer base. Who is buying their products? This could include demographic information like age, location, buying behavior, and preferences. It's important that we give them a clearer picture of their audience.

4. What is driving campaign performance and buyer decision-making? Finally, we need to uncover the key factors that influence how well a campaign performs and what makes customers decide to purchase. Is it the messaging, the product itself, the offers, or something else? This will help them refine their marketing strategy.

Focus on building the BI tool with these specific insights in mind. The data you're working with should give us some solid starting points, but feel free to dig deeper where needed to provide actionable insights. Let me know if you need anything specific to move forward.

Instructions for Analyst:

- You will need to think critically about how to organize these analyses across different tabs within the Power BI report to ensure clarity and ease of navigation.
- Each tab should be focused on a specific area of analysis, with the most relevant visuals and metrics clearly displayed.
- Consider grouping related insights together in logical sections, such as sales trends, product performance, customer behavior, and shipping analysis, to improve report usability and insight discovery.

Deliverables:

- A comprehensive Power BI report that includes all of the above analysis requirements.
- An interactive dashboard with dynamic filtering and visualization options.
- A well-documented summary report that outlines the insights, findings, and actionable recommendations derived from the data.
